Suggested Book Discussion Questions

A note to educators:

The discussion questions in this resource can help facilitate deep conversation about not only the story of Sadako but the history and life lessons that come from this biographical, historical novel about a young girl who pays the ultimate sacrifice for a war not her own and who teaches and continues to teach the world a valuable lesson about life, family, commitment, and perseverance against all odds.

These questions are focused on personal connections and aren't meant to have one exact response, and as such you will find no answer key. The goal is to foster analysis and higher-level thinking about oneself and the world by using the text as a catalyst. You will find that many of the questions require students to support their claims with text evidence as required by the Common Core State Standards.

Select the questions that best fit your needs and the needs of the children reading the book. We hope you find the resource helpful. Looking to connect with other children reading the book? Post a question to Padlet and invite a connection class to collaborate or share thinking and have students respond to each other. Have students who have trouble writing, consider using Flipgrid. Post a discussion question and have students respond orally. Then share the grid with another class and watch magic happen as your students consider other viewpoints and respond.

Both resources are free and easy to set up as well as secure for classroom use.

List of Possible Discussion Questions:

1. How would you describe Sadako? What character traits does she possess? What evidence from the text supports your claim?
2. Compare Sadako's life to your own childhood. Do you find similarities? Differences? Select one similarity and one difference and explain.
3. What surprised you? Why?
4. What does the author think you already know? How does this impact your understanding of the story?
5. Every book you read leaves a mark on your heart, meaning it has changed you as a person in some way. Reflect back on this book, how are you different now? What parts of the book brought about that change? What will you do differently or how will you act differently in the future because of this book? Be sure to explain your claims and support them with evidence.
6. Sadako's brother supported her throughout her life. What can you learn from the relationship between the siblings?
7. The description of the moment the bomb dropped and what the Sasaki family went through paints a picture in your mind. Reread that section with a focus on your emotions. What do you notice?
8. The United States dropped the bomb on Hiroshima in an attempt to resolve a terrible conflict. Research this historical time period in world history. Did the United States do the right thing? Why or why not? What would you have done differently?

9. How would you describe Sadako's brother? If you could ask him a question, what would it be and why?
10. What is the symbolism in the paper crane?
11. How do you feel when you make a paper crane? Why?
12. The author uses first hand accounts and actual photographs in this book. What impact do the images and personal stories told by her brother have on your emotions as you read? On your understanding of the story? On the historical events? Be sure to support your claims with evidence from the text.
13. If you could go back in time to talk to the pilot who dropped the bomb, what would you tell him?
14. If you could go back in time to talk with Sadako, what would you tell her about how she inspired you?
15. How did Sadako change as a person throughout her story? What caused those changes? Support your claims with evidence.
